Weequahic High School

Newark, New Jersey

The Legend January 1938

Life is a school my friend,
One of its pupils you.
A beginner you are,
Never finished, indeed.

To Miss F. May Bullock

Dedication

For encouragement in time of failure,
For reprimand in time of error,
For restraint in time of success,
We the Class of January, 1938
Dedicate this issue of the LEGEND

Foreword

Again the gates of Weequalic High School open their wide jaws and release eager young lives who, but a day or two ago, were the seniors of their Alma Mater.

For four years, they strove to attain the high goal of graduation so that they might be able to prove their willingness in taking life into their own hands and to make it worthwhile for themselves and this beautiful country.

As the crowning achievement of its schooldays the class of January '38 compiled this issue of the Legend. It is the work of all members of the class regardless of whether or not they belonged to any of its staffs.

And in this sense, we hope and wish sincerely that this book furnish forever happy reminiscences of our school years which so soon will lie remotely in the past.

Jo Our Faculty Advisers

You helped us when we were in need; And when we faltered, you were near. You guided us with word and deed And banished all our fear.

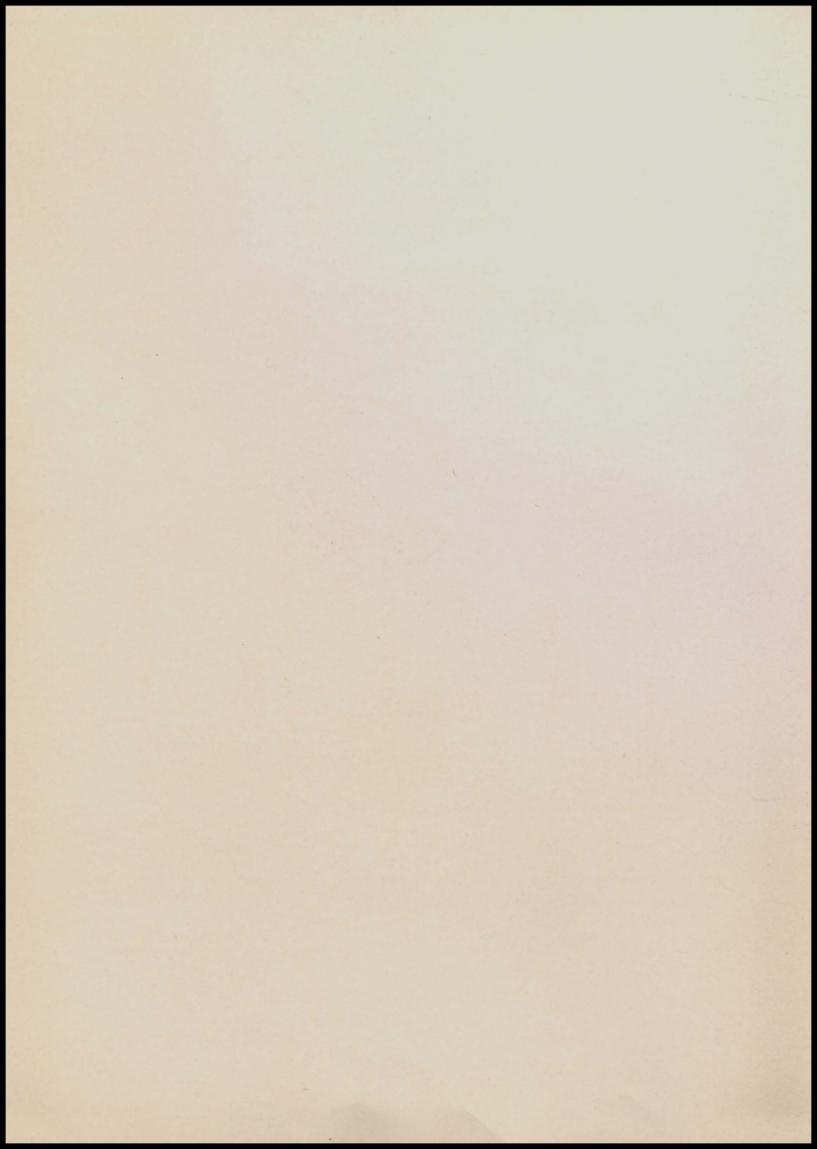

When difficulties rose ahead; And when we tired of the fray It was your confidence that led Us straight upon our way.

From us you got but rarely thanks
Yet, soon it shall be true
That everyone within our ranks
Will learn to cherish you!

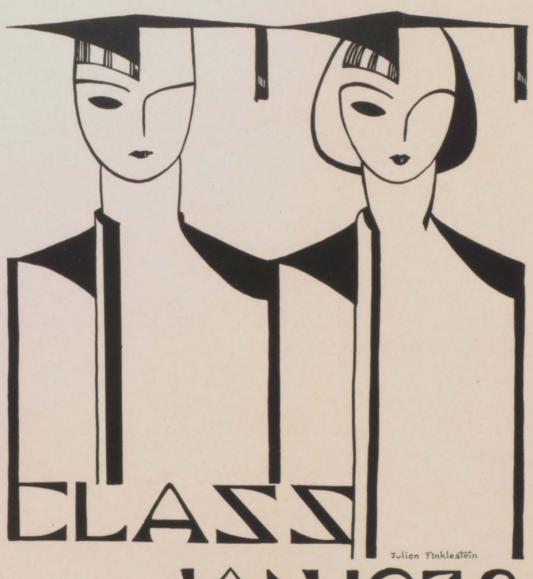

Hans Juergensen.

JAN. 938

Class Song

(Tune of "Auld Lang Syne.")
Here, we gather once again
To say good-bye to thee.
Before we go as future men,
So boundlessly free.

But, as we pass thru all thy rooms To look at them once more, We fear the hour that still looms Upon thy heavy door;

The hour which excludes us all From thy beloved care.— From every class, from every ball Regretfully we tear

Our hearts away from those four years That in thy realm we spent. Into a world of hate and fears We shall henceforth be sent.

Yet, let us pledge to work and toil With all our lives and souls To keep unclaimed this cherished soil And reach our final goals.

And so we leave thee, firm and brave, But with a heavy sigh We turn around once more and wave A last and long Good Bye....

Class Will of January, 1938

We, the class of January, 1938, fearing that we are about to pass from our earthly abode, and being sound of mind, do hereby declare this to be our last will and testament.

Warning!

If anyone be so bold as to attempt breaking this will, the entire body of students of the graduating class has resolved to come back and haunt the culprit.

We now bestow our earthly belongings in the following manner:

Item I.

We so declare the class of January, 1938, to be the lawful successors of these rights and privileges:

- 1. The right to have cheek to cheek dancing.
- 2. The right to your own opinion.
- 3. The right to object if your homework assignment is more than three-quarters of an hour long.

Item II.

Now we bequeathe to worthy individuals the following items:

- 1. We will Molly Eagle's curls to any girl without a permanent.
- 2. We will Dorothy Savel's nimble finger to anyone who appreciates fine music.
- 4. We leave Ruth Hookaylo's energetic spirit to anyone who needs it.
- 5. We leave Daniel Schaeffer's nimble brain to anyone lacking gray matter.
- 6. We leave Eileen Sperber's love of the opera to anyone who can afford a season ticket.
- 7. We bequeathe to all prospective seniors Herbert Perr's motto: "just leave."
- 8. We will Morris Josephowitz's modesty to anyone who is too presuming.
- 9. We leave Shirley Coppleson's third seat in the fourth row to the next enterprising graduate.
- 10. We leave Harry Cohen's ability to tell stories to anyone who needs a good excuse.
- 11. We leave Ethel Braverman's sweet smile to anyone who likes to take a good picture.
- 12. We leave Stanley Littman's friendliness to anyone with political aspirations.
- 13. We will Irene Maroukis's good nature to anyone who dislikes fights.
- 14. We leave, regretfully, Shirley Kobrin's place as Miss Wyckoff's secretary.
- 15. We leave Florence Solomon's voice to the next glee club member.

In witness whereof, we, class of January nineteen-hundred and thirty-eight, the attestors, have to this our last will set our hand and seal, this last day of January nineteen-hundred and thirty-eight.

Witnesses:

SHIRLEY COPPLESON.

Class Prophecy

With an ominous rumble of his huge massive cloak, Father Time gathers to him the remains of ten past years.

It is January in the year of nineteen-hundred and forty-eight. The mist clears and we can accurately see:—

Irma Greenberg, giving notes to her (dietetics) class, forgetting to give tomorrow's assignment.

Daniel Schaeffer, as the head of a very successful business firm, trying, for the life of him, to remember where be put the Steven's contract.

Adele Stern, tooting her saxophone in an All-Girl Band.

Richard Elterman, as the immortal Fuller Brush Man, given a chance (for the first time) to talk without stopping.

Ruth Hookaylo, taking dictation in one of the better business firms, and wondering if she can remember the part she left out in the middle of the letter, when it comes to typing it.

Mrs. Sam Cohen, or pardon me, I mean Ethel Eisenberg, wondering if you can put the children to sleep, and still have time to attend the weekly bridge club.

Joe Spiro, selling a pair of shoes to a one-legged man, convincing him that you never can tell when the one will wear out.

Dorothy Savel, as the featured pianist in a concert given by a well known orchestra.

Frieda Hastreiter, teaching dramatics to a class of eager-eyed students of the drama.

Adele Klarman putting on a sustaining program of blues songs, and being spoken of, in almost the same sentence, with Kate Smith.

Shirley Levin, speaking to the Ladies' Aid Society, on "Why my children are without that under-nourished look."

Stanley Littman, eagerly awaiting the returns of the latest election to see if the men he gave those five-cent cigars to, really voted for him.

And so, with diploma in hand, as the key to the future, the graduating class of January nineteen-hundred and thirty-eight, will tread the road before them. The paths may be varied and inconsistent. But remember, the graduates are all starting out on the same footing, they have the clay and can mold it to suit their own ideals.

Benedicta came to Weequahic to Lerner lessons, or did she?

Would Adele be liked if she were Stern?

If Ann likes money will she marry a Silverman?

We wonder if Molly is afraid of an Eagle.

Would Beatrice be angry if she didn't get her Sher?

When he leads an orchestra Philip waves a Wand.

Is it possible that William drives a Carr?

I'd like to see if Annette could Canter.

Could Florence be as wise as Solomon?

We guess the Storck is Sylvan's favorite bird.

Elmer would look nice if all his clothes were Taylor made.

If Stanley caught fire would he be a Littman?

Does Ruth like this Burg?

Does Joe eat Hammer eggs?

When Morris gets his diploma he'll feel like a king on a Throne.

If Geraldine talked too much would they Locker up?

If Mary were tired would she hire a Hansen?

If Mildred was an Indian (from Weequahic) would they call her "Caha"?

Knox, Knox, who's there, -Doris, -Doris who? -Doris Knox.

Bet Danny was cute when he was a little Schaeffer.

The Father of Intramural Sports

All of us know the dark-haired, ever-smiling youth who is called "father," though his years number but seventeen. And yet he deserves the title of father, for Sam Rudowsky is the father of Weequahic's intramural sports.

In the fall of 1934, Sam broke his shoulder in a football game and thus was henceforth disqualified for varsity sports. But his dynamic personality would not suffer to remain on the sidelines. He perceived the plan to form a league of classes which were to carry on competitive sports within the walls of our Alma Mater. And not long after Sam hit upon his idea, he put it to practical use.

Soon, the sport-eager students of all grades and degrees were joined into one league which built up sturdy sportsmen, many of whom were taken into varsity teams on later occasions. On Sam's shoulders rested the responsibility of directing games, making out schedules, and keeping records. And he disposed of these duties with amazing skill and efficiency. Not satisfied with this accomplishment in our own school he sought the permission of founding intramural sport leagues in the grammar schools of the Weequahic section. And there, too, Sam did an admirable piece of work.

Now, Sam leaves this school in which he has set a lasting monument for himself.

And we, his fellow graduates, are justly proud of him. He has proven his ability to organize and benefit his fellow men while still in school. And so, Sam takes his exit accompanied by the most sincere wishes for success from all those who know him and worked with him.

Good luck to you, Sam!

Broadcast

Announcer: Hello folks, this is Ted Brody speaking . . . We're in between the halves of that great vivesectional game of the current season, between the Conestaga College Cougers of the Southwest, in their flashy uniforms, and the University of Maulde Marauders, the big red team from the Mohawk Valley We have a great surprise for you this afternoon, radio listeners As a special feature we are going to interview a host of sport celebrities from all parts of the country Step this way, boys Our first guest will be none other than Ben "Flash" Minowitz, who is familiar to many of you football fans Ben starred at Weequahic High both on the diamond and the gridiron, and in his senior year at Jayle U., won honorable mention as All-American quarterback Say a few words over the air waves, Ben Minowitz: Uh, oh yes uh um.

Announcer: Thank you, Ben And now we bring you another famous footballer who shone at Weequahic High and now basks in the public spotlight Ike "Plunger" Lentz who ran and passed his way to fame at Sparks Tech . . . All right, Ike Take the mike

Lentz: It was a great fight, folks Don't worry mom and dad, I'll be home early And Announcer: All right, Ike It is our pleasure to present, William "Kiddie" Carr, a diamond hero at Weequahic, and whose potent bat won many a game for State . . . How can we forget the State-Penn game where this diminutive son of the Pink and Purple, single-handed, stole the show from his more experienced opponents . . . A little closer, Willie Say hello to the radio audience . . .

Carr: Hello

Announcer: Our next celebrity is Bert "Bull" Manhoff who managed the basketball squad and was a guard on the gridiron while at Weequahic. "Bull" is at present a three letter man at G. P. U. . . . and just won the intercollegiate heavyweight wrestling diadem . . . Say something, "Bull"

Manhoff: Ugh

Announcer: The next guest is that well-known star, who played football and basket-ball at Weequahic and who later played at Saint Matthew's, our own Marty "Doc" Goldstein How do you enjoy this game, "Doc"?

Goldstein: Well as an authority on football I would say that Announcer: That's great "Doc", I know we all appreciate your little talk Well, well, here's Sol "Sonny" Bauer, former baseball star at Weequahic and member of the World Champion Blue Sox ball club . . . "Sonny" has just completed his second season of major league ball . . . How are you, "Sonny"?

Bauer: Fine How are you?

Announcer: That was "Sonny" Bauer, folks . . . and here's Eddie "Tarzan" Greenfield, also a former court star and footballer at Weequahic. Eddie starred on the gridiron at Pawtucket U. and has just signed a movie contract to play in a "Tarzan" feature . . . Say something "Eddie"

Greenfield: What's Clark Taylor got that I haven't got?

Announcer: We're sure you can tackle that job Eddie Our next star is Al "Shorty" Dworkin famous basketballer at Weequahic and Lackawanna U. Say Al If I'm not too personal How tall are you?

Dworkin: Seven foot-two . . . And I'm still growing

Announcer: All right, "Shorty" and here's "Irish Bob" Olesky One of the most versatile players on the Weequahic team, having played every position and now starring at Smythe Bob is noted for his ruggedness, courage, and continual chatter Take the mike, Bob

Olesky: That's because I eat Roddy's Canned Spinach

Announcer: Thanks for the plug, Bob . . . Well if it isn't my old friend Morris "Strong & Silent" Throne . . . Morris, you all know, played the tackle post at Weequahic and went on to star at C. C. C. C. . . . What do you think of the Spanish situation, Morris?

Throne: I pick the Giants in four games.

Announcer: Too bad And here's Shea "Papa" Schacter a great pass receiver at "Weequahic" whose one-hand grabs at Morphine U., have made gridiron history Shea is married and has four sets of twins How about a few words, Shea Schacter: Mr. Dionne Fooey!

Announcer: Pretty good, Shea Our next celebrity is Jimmy "Bruiser" Neville, as fearless and courageous a tackler, as found on any football field. Jimmy, a product of Weequahic is now playing Pro football with Bluefield Bears of the American Association. What's the secret of your success, Jim?

Neville: Every day I eat a bowlful of Super Special Goodie Molasses Flakes. Grr r . . . am I tough

Announcer: All right, all right And radio listeners last but not least we present the promotor of this football spectacle, former major domo of intramurals at Weequahic High, Sam (Call me "Rudy") Rudowsky How's the game, Sam?

Rudowsky: Well, we have exactly 62,451 spectators, the gross receipts, $72,766.22 and the net, $47,299.67, plus a special intake of Announcer: Just a second, Sam Has anyone an asperin tablet? A minute for station identification, folks This is a ghost to ghost hook-up of the D. K. K. Broadcasting Company.

Weequahic's Girls, too, have shown their ability in athletics

The present seniors have played a dominant part in intramural sports for four years. With a spirit of fun, cooperation, and sportsmanship they have entered into activities zealously. The following girls have been outstanding:

Eleanore Schwankert. Her sturdy person on any team was cause enough for victory. She is a dangerous forward on the basketball court, a powerful slugger in volley ball, achieved her Life Saving Senior Emblem, and has captained several teams. She received the "W" and also the highest girls award, the athletic pin.

Edith Pill. Diminutive Edith was the shiftiest center on her class basketball team, a skillful badminton netster, hard hitting hockey player, clever volleyball star, and a good archer. Small but fast, she caused much fear on the part of her opponents. She has received her letter.

Sylvia Badler. She is an all around athlete and was outstanding in most of the athletic activities. She has led the fray in many a battle. She is a keen and alert loopster, clever at whacking the puck on a hockey field, deft at handling a badminton racket, speedy on a volleyball court, and a consistent scorer in archery. Sylvia achieved her "W" in three years, and was the first senior to receive an athletic pin.

Etta Zimmerman. While Etta captained her team in basketball, volleyball, badminton, and hockey, her ability was best shown in achery and swimming. During her years at Weequahic she received her Junior and Senior Life Saving Emblems. When mentioning archery we cannot forget the laurels she won at the Plainfield Play Day, earning a score which was two points under state record. Etta is another of the "W" girls.

There are many more girls who were consistent in turning out for these various teams, and without them those teams could not have been so successful. These honorable-mention-girls are: Beatrice Abramson, Ruth Eisen, Florence Bamdas, Shirley Levin, Ruth Hookaylo, Evelyn Fox, Nancy Schupka, Evelyn Kaplan, Thelma Bowdish and Mildred Caha.

Win or Lose

Our present seniors have played a large part in the success of our varsity squads. Although the percentage of games won does not greatly overshadow those lost, the boys on the teams have shown plenty of the "Ol' Weequahic spirit."

Charles J. Schneider, Director of Athletics, probably struck the keynote of Weequahic athletics when he addressed the baseball squad last spring, "Even if we can't will all our games, we can still have a lot of fun."

In all our athletic endeavors our advisors have emphasized courage, coolness and sportsmanship rather than putting the importance on the fact that the game must be won. Our success is not measured by how many star athletes we can turn out, but is dependent upon how many of our student body are molded into fine American citizens.

Win or lose, in spite of the odds, one can always be sure of an interesting and exciting contest, with that Weequahic spirit prevailing.

THEODORE BRODY.

In Retrospect

On a memorable day in February, 1934, the portals of Weequahic High were opened to a host of newcomers, and they entered, freshmen one and all. With a great deal of anxiety and trepidation, they looked forward to a high-school career, not knowing what it had in store for them.

The early part of the freshman year was spent in acclimating themselves to new surroundings, new faces, and new rules and regulations. After this brief period of adaptation, they found themselves an integral part of the loyal student body so characteristic of Weequahic.

Much was accomplished in the academic field during these four years; although the social, athletic, and cultural aspects were not neglected. They were imbued with a spirit which urged them on to loftier attainments. The faculty took a prominent role in helping them achieve their aims, and ambitions. Staunch friendships have been cultivated, and contacts made, which they know will remain with them as they enter new fields of endeavor.

Now it is time to say good-bye.—Should the path, leading to the fulfillment of their fondest desires, become rough, and strewn with obstacles, the recollection of these high-school days will furnish them with strength and enlightenment, and thus be an inspiration toward the achievement, of the finer objectives in life.

ARNOLD KIRSCH.

Editorial

I was asked to write an editorial for the yearbook, so I sat down at my desk and began, or I should say commenced, since our commencement isn't so far off,—to dope out a possible theme for said editorial.

Well, let me see! I don't like to write about the common, ordinary things, so I shall take for my subject that creature which is usually called teacher.

Don't you think a teacher is a subject to meditate upon?

Now consider our faculty. These men and women enrolled in the high art of educating young roughnecks, or coquettes, to clever, peace-loving, all-honoring citizens.

O my! do I pity those teachers!

But, to be serious for a change, I do not only pity them, but I love them too. And my love for them outweighs by far that feeling of pity which is, anyhow, a very poor and low feeling.

Just think of the years we have spent under their guidance. We shall miss them greatly.

Yes, we often played pranks on them and gave them hard times. Yet, we always met with understanding and often went to them when we were in trouble. And never did these gentle souls reject or remind us of our mischievous attempts to get the "goods" on them.

I could account for any number of names of teachers who tried so hard to get wisdom across to us lazy and negligent individuads. I can call the roll with a sense of gratitude, gratitude for their deep understanding of our often trivial problems.

And you, my brothers and co-mates in graduation, will have to agree with me, nolens volens, upon the point that our instructors were, and still are, regular fellows.

Some might have been stricter than our vicissitudes cared for. However, soon, out there in that mysterious realm, called life, we shall realize how wise they were, how much we needed to be restricted and disciplined.

And thus, I shall hereby close this editorial, lest I might break out in woeful tears.

Let us all be fair for once, and give our faculty its just deserts. Let us hail our instructors as the bearers of the living past and the raisers of a nation.

And let us prove to them that, although we often were obstinate and difficult, we still learned enough to go ahead and make for a better, truer, and more genuine human existence.

HANS JUERGENSEN.

Four Stages of Man

Freshman are like cuckoo birds, They're always just on time. They gather by themselves in herds, And boast of heights they'll climb.

A sophomore is a mouthy one, Who can't resist a grin. And when he ends, he's just begun To put his two-cents in.

The juniors cast a jealous eye, With hopes of gaining fame, At posts the seniors occupy To widen their acclaim.

A senior is a snooty guy, He worries not 'bout fate His ambition's not too high— To drive his dad's V-8.

THEODORE BRODY.

The 4A's

We feel supreme, we seniors all, We won't admit that we're so small. We walk around with heads up high, Our noses right up in the sky.

The terms have passed—You cannot say That we are wrong to act this way. We've learned some French and History, We've pondered o'er Geometry.

As classmates, we all joined in one. We helped each other have our fun, We watched our games and cheered our teams, We worked quite hard for goals and dreams.

Weequabic High, we leave at last, With joyous memories holding fast. We'll strive, we'll fight; I'm sure we'll win, In fields of life now to begin.

FRANCES ROSENBLOOM.

What is Man?

From his attic window the student gazed upon a scene wild in its beauty, overwhelming in its complete submerging of everything. From his window the student looked and pondered.

Here was nature, and all of man's ingenuity could not prevent this onslaught of uncontrollable forces from disrupting its schedule.

Here and there, street lights gleamed, casting a ghostly, wavering light over a small section of wet pavement. On both sides of the street black hulks rose, with only an occasional spark of light, indicating human habitation.

But the student sat in the dark. The somber beauty of the rain-drenched night overwhelmed him. The comforting pitter-patter of the raindrops was a lulling song as he pondered upon life.

Outside the rain beat harder. An occasional figure passed, protected from the penetrating rain by raincoat and umbrella. But it seemed as though each passerby was being thoroughly drenched, and the pensive watcher shivered at the thought.

The wind had risen to a howling crescendo as the few remaining leaves on the trees, left by man's ruthless development of his civilization, fluttered to the ground and lay there, as nature glued them to the pavement, thus ending their brief span of existence.

The student tried to think of people, but mere musing could not penetrate the cover which the rain had laid upon his mind. It was as though the rain were pinning his mind down, as it had pinned down the last leaves.

Slowly, as if with an effort, he rose and turned his back to the window. It seemed an ideal time to study Plato, Aristotle, and all the others, whose philosophy has been carried down through centuries as precious jewels. Tonight, it seemed that they were dull and drab, men of no import.

It was the rain, the overwhelming force of nature asserting a philosophy greater than any yet propounded. What matters man in the infinite magnitude of a universe, of what worth are his small achievements? Nature is yet king.

ELY CHINOY.

English Lesson

Hazy day upon the field; Warm and sluggish was the room. Our minds would nothing yield, And our marks pronounced grave doom.

For we should have known the work Our teacher had assigned. But no hearty mental jerk Helped us out—so we resigned.

Yet, the teacher did not scold; He looked at us and smiled. And 'twas not long before he told Of when he was a child.

He told of all the rules he broke Described to us those bearded men, His teachers.—And while thus he spoke, He grew young once again.—

Forgotten were Poe's mystic tales, Forsaken were our books. We all were walking sunny trails With gurgling mountain brooks.

Our features gleamed in sheer delight, While, with his fluent wit, He asked to be,—in silent plight,— Among us kids, a kid . . .

HANS JUERGENSEN.

Homo Genus

The chill Siberian morning bit thru Ivan Petrovitch's heavy uniform as he paced out across the square. The rising sun disclosed the fact that though it was early there were a few grimy spectators gathered. It was the same sun that shone on America; the same sun that shone on the Argentine; the same sun that shone on England. But instead of the sun shining its personality on Siberia, Siberia tatooed its drear upon the sun. From the left, at first dimly, then louder and louder, now supplemented by the clack of cleated boots came the rolling drum. The firing squad with its six bound prisoners drew close to Ivan Petrovitch.

"Halt!" he bellowed, and the wall answered, "Halt." Ivan Petrovitch reached into his pocket, drew out a sealed document, broke the seal, unfolded it. The cold air turned his breath to steam as he read.

"Boris Markoff! Sentenced for sabotage,—said the Soviet Government was despotic. Ready! Aim! Fire!" There was a crack of rifles, a man dropped, the crowd mumbled.

"Morris Kameroff" Sentenced for sabotage,—worked under par. Ready! Aim! Fire!" Another bundle lay at the foot of the wall. Again the crowd mumbled.

"Al—Alexis Petrovitch!—Sentenced for sabotage,—raised his voice to an officer. Ready! Aim!——"

"Father! Father!" cried the prisoner.

"Fire!" answered the father. Three bundles lay at the foot of the wall. This time the crowd was silent.

ROBERT THEISE.

The Hour of God

When the shadows of nocturna sink Slowly down on Mother Earth; When early stars peer through and wink, And the meadow turns into a berth

On which the clouds float to their rest, Where plants their heads now wearily nod; When dew drops from the mountain crest, Then I shall speak to God.

Then I will gaze into the skies, And I will lie upon the ground, My ear wide open to the cries Of nightly life—and every sound,

Each word that nature has to tell. My eyes will then behold the charms Of every tree, each hill, each dell, And I shall grasp them in my arms.

And then, I utter grateful words
I tell of all my work and toil
I tell them to the sleeping birds
To all the waters, and the soil.

I let my soul take haltless flight
Onto the paths where I have trod,
While the world was yet awake and bright.—
And thus, I speak to God. . .

HANS JUERGENSEN.

Evening Reflections

O, how lovely is this eve After heat and dust of day. Lightly blows a breeze this way, Shaking, stirring every leaf, That, till now, had laz'ly hung, Lulled to sleep by golden ray Which, so joyful and so gay 'Round the world its charm had flung.

And I, on this cooling eve,
Read and learn in ancient tales,
Walk on mountain paths and trails,
Feel and see great mortals grieve;
Hear the bugles sound aloud
Full of battle, death and rage,
Full with horror of an age
Where the ill-fated weep and crowd—

But among these tunes of eve I also hear of happy lands . . . I feel the patting of strange hands That, stroking softly, with me leave Contentment, happiness, and glee, That show the strength of soul and heart That tell of nature, men, and art, That say and prove that I am free.

And still upon this restful eve,
Come voices of the days gone by
And urge to labor and to try;
To follow them, and to achieve,
What they could not—which is undone,
Now, they command, and now they plead
With me—to give, like them, and lead.—
And now, I know; they won!—

And finally, this beauteous eve Turns slowly into night. The stars appear,—and by the light So many dreams I weave . . . I listen to the sages yet Whose words are wise and true, Whose thoughts are old, still ever new, Revealed by the works they bred.

And now, the eve has turned to night, The leaves now sleep again.
And resting too, are wind and men.
But within me, it is bright!—
And once more speak the great to me:
Our duties, lad, and works are done.
But thou must strive and struggle on,
Our heritage, we give to thee . . .

HANS JUERGENSEN.

Noon—A quaint village asleep—simple—serene, A golden tear-drop in God's domain, of beauty unsurpassed, Buried deep in a wooded hillock, Each leafy bough arched skyward as in prayer. . . .

The rumble of guns shakes the earth,
The whir of motors,—huge bombing planes—
Pawns in the hand of a lust-maddened despot
—Sends its messengers of death and destruction
Winging earthward.

The terrain heaves, a city uprooted—demolished,
The air acrid with putrefaction and sulphur fumes;
The sky aglow, punctuated by bursts of flame.
Everything a mass of wreckage, a veritable graveyard.
A cool mist falls, a mysterious mist
That gives a silvery beauty to disappearing fields
Daylight melts into dusk, the booming has ceased.

The moon, a faded yellow disk

Casts a sickly pallor oer the sea of destruction,

Passing slowly into obscurity behind a screen of smoke,

Then darkness. . . .

Nightmares

It was the fourth quarter, Weequahic 6—Hillside 7; and the timekeeper was constantly glancing at his watch. From the packed stands came the chant of two thousand voices—"Fight, team, fight."

On the field the team called for a time out. "Come on, gang, we can still win this ball game," and "Scabby" Greenfield looked around belligerently, as if to challenge anyone to dispute his assertion.

Wearily the team rose, wearily the men tramped to their positions, and crouched low. Almost as a unit they felt that, if they ever lay down upon that soft earth once more, they would never rise again.

A confident Hillside team trooped out of its huddle, got down in position, and then charged. And a roar split the autumn air as a loose ball bounced around, to be covered up immediately by the solid form of Bert Manhoff.

A temporarily rejuvenated Weequahic team rushed to the huddle, out again, and shifted to position. The ball was snapped, Minowitz took it, ran to the right like a startled rabbit, cut in, and, as he was hit, he lattraled to end Shea Schacter who, protected by the sterling blocking of Bob Olesky, Morris Throne, and Jimmy Neville, managed to advance the ball several yards up the field, but in the end was surrounded by vicious Hillside tacklers. Desperately he looked around. Far to the left he saw the lumbering figure of Bert Manhoff. Desperately he winged the ball toward him. It was taken by that player par excellence, who, gleaning a last bit of power from some unknown source, spurted for the goal, away from grasping hands.

Nearer and nearer came the goal posts, larger and larger loomed in his mind the acclaim of his fellow classmates. Then something hit from behind, drove him through the air, but landed him over the goal line, with his head pillowed upon the soft earth. But for some unaccountable reason he felt strangely cold.

Then his sense of triumph was shattered, shattered by a stentorian voice, "Bert! Bert! Get up, you'll be late for school, and how in heaven did you get on the floor, with that cushion under you. And no covers. Why, you must be freezing."

Many moons have risen since we first pitched our tepees on these sacred camping grounds. Here we have had good hunting; our baskets have overflown with grain. Waconda has smiled upon us. Now, our plowing is finished, our wigwams folded, our horses packed. We leave.

But we go not with empty hands.

You, Weequahic, have given us those fruits which sustain while life remains. We feel it our humble duty to leave with you a gift—our holy Totem.

On its top, the Sacred Thunder Bird broods to frighten away all evils; next, the Bear, symbol of perseverance. Third, the Owl of Knowledge; and finally, the Evergreen Tree, standing for our tradition that blooms ever anew.

Our love for you is more than yesterday, less than tomorrow.

Tab-ee!

ROBERT THEISE.

A Word of Appreciation

The members of the Legend Staff desire to thank the following persons for their generous cooperation, intense interest, and valuable help in assembling this Year Book.

Miss Margaret McCullen, adviser, whose supervision was so valuable.

Mrs. Marie R. Bernstein who advised the staff on all literary material.

Mrs. Leila F. Payton, art adviser, who supervised the art and photographic work.

The class advisers: Miss F. May Bullock, 305; Miss A. Emma Conrad, 311; Miss Anita A. Quinn, 107; Miss Helen G. Stevenson, 101; Miss Marion M. Wykoff, 333; and Miss Sadie R. Zimmerman, 307; who have been most considerate and understanding of the needs of this class.

Mr. J. Pierre Lassans of the Colyer Printing Company, whose technical advice was so great an aid to the members of the staff.

The Crescent Studio, to whom we owe the excellence of our photographs.

Mr. William B. Mayer, who prepared our advertising blanks in the school printshop.

THE ADVERTISERS, WHOSE SPLENDID COOPERATION HAS MADE THIS JANUARY '38 LEGEND A POSSIBILITY.

Fine Quality Printing is nowhere so essential as in school and college annuals. The story told by copy is worthless unless the printed pages provide eloquent testimony of its truthful reproduction of campus life.

- Production of distinctive printing depends upon the masterful handling of such technicalities as layout, artwork, make-ready, and presswork, and also upon the selection of proper ink, paper and binding.
 - Consistently good printing has made the Colyer organization the first and last choice of the leading schools and colleges.
